

SHORT BIO NOTE

---

Dahou Djeral is a professor of modern history in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Algiers-Bouzareah (Algeria). He teaches a wide range of subjects from colonial to postcolonial societies. His research currently concentrates on the relationship between history and memory. He was invited as Visiting Fellow and Visiting Professor at several academic institutions and research: Princeton University, NJ, USA (1995-1996), IEP Paris (2003 and 2004); EHESS Paris (2007 and 2008); Paris 8 Saint Denis (2010). As editor of Naqd, A journal of social criticism (1991-2008) (<http://www.revue-naqd.org>) since the early 1990s, he has dedicated himself to the publication of studies relating to postcolonial societies and newly independent states.