Bionote: Julija Kekstaite is a Ph.D. fellow at the University of Ghent, affiliated with both the Department of Social Work and Pedagogy and the Department of Sociology. She holds a Master's degree in Sociology, specializing in Migration and Ethnic Studies from the University of Amsterdam. Her research is focused on the sociological aspects of forced migration, particularly along the EU's Eastern migratory route. Drawing on ethnographic methods she explores various forms of grassroots activism within this context. Additionally, her academic work engages with different strands of critical theory, examining the underlying social and political dynamics related to migration and activism.
